The present document has been prepared within the framework of the authority and competencies of the Cyprus Agency of Quality Assurance and Accreditation in Higher Education, according to the provisions of the "Quality Assurance and Accreditation of Higher Education and the Establishment and Operation of an Agency on Related Matters Laws" of 2015 to 2021 [L.136(I)/2015 – L.132(I)/2021].

B. Guidelines on content and structure of the report

The EEC based on the external evaluation report (Doc.300.3.1) and the Higher Education Institution's response (Doc.300.3.2), must justify whether actions have been taken in improving the quality of the department in each assessment area.

Areas of improvement and recommendations by EEC	Actions Taken by the Institution	EEC's final recommendations and comments on the HEI's response
Drop-out rates were not provided.	Over a period of 6 years between 2011 and 2017 there have been 19 dropouts (see Annex 13).	Full.
It is not clear whether students are asked to evaluate the programme as a whole and whether student feedback has been used to inform the design of the programme.	Students are asked to evaluate every course and the instructor at the end of each module. An online survey with close- ended and open-ended questions is being completed by each student evaluating the structure, delivery, aims achieved of the course. Likewise, students can evaluate the instructor of the course providing feedback on the further improvement of the course. The tabulated evaluation summary is then reviewed by the program committee and the QA committee for any program changes and any needed improvements or modifications considering the students' feedback.	Partial. Examples of how student feedback informed program design are not provided.
The Program is not available to international students unless they are fluent in Greek.	Now the program is offered in Greek, and it is available for Greek-speaking students. Our main target group for this master's is educators /researchers who are working in education, whether in Cyprus or Greece, where the official language is Greek. If the language of instruction was English, it would be difficult for the students to follow and attend the courses. However, the main bibliography that we use is in English and all students must use this during their studies.	Partial. The University should modify its claim to be accessible to international students. The University is also missing the opportunity to access potential students from private schools, where the medium is English. Students should be offered the option to prepare assessments in English.
The programme is not up to date, in respect of the theory, literature, and research, in terms of recommended books, journal	Both conventional and online programs have been entirely redesigned and restructured based on the accreditors' constructive feedback and suggestions. 2. Student – centred learning, teaching and assessment (ESG 1.3)

Areas of improvement and recommendations by EEC	Actions Taken by the Institution	EEC's final recommendations and comments on the HEI's response
Most of the courses are not specific to ELM.	After the program's restructuring, as EEC suggested, all the courses are specific to ELM. The new structure of the master course encompasses six (6) core courses (10 ECTS per module) which are specific to ELM + an obligatory Master thesis (30 ECTS) for students to investigate further and deeper the ELM field. See Annex 1.	Partial. Annex 1 shows that only two courses (ED 595 and ED605) are specific to ELM. The claim that all courses are specific to ELM betrays weak understanding of what constitutes a specialist ELM master's degree.
Students can access library resources through Moodle without the need to log in (single log in between Moodle and library) that ensures easy access to the library. There is technical support in place to help students and staff with any issues related to Teams and Moodle. However, there are very limited resources (books and academic journals) specific to ELM.	We have expanded our resources to include many books and academic journals specific to ELM. We have already updated our resources and made new subscriptions to journals related to ELM. For the needs of the Postgraduate Program in ELM, the Limassol University Library has all the necessary electronic academic e-resources available, with subscriptions to EBSCO Host, ProQuest Central and cooperation with the University of Cyprus Library for interlibrary loan.	Partial. Examples of new book acquisitions are required. The list of journal subscriptions shown later omits most of the core journals in this field.
The programme director and team appeared responsive to the questions and comments of the EEC. Students are asked to apply theoretical learning to their practice and reflect on it, facilitating connections between theory and practice. However, most of the curriculum content is not related to educational leadership or management (ELM).	After the program's restructuring, as EEC suggested, all the curriculum content is related to ELM. We have updated our learning resources and focused on ELM including many interactive activities to give students the opportunity to interact with the material and explore the ELM field. See the updated study guides and course outlines in Annex 5.	Partial. Most of Annex 5 is in Greek, so not accessible to most EEC members. However, Annex 1, and the English language elements of Annex 5, show that most of the courses re not focused on ELM, despite the University's claim. This appears to be a classic case of a curriculum designed to fit staff expertise rather than one focused on core ELM theory, research, and practice.
The online programme has nine courses while the conventional programme has 11 courses. The two programmes should be consistent in	-Both conventional and online programs were fully redesigned and restructured based on the	Partial. Annex 1 shows that only two modules (ED595 and ED605) are suitable for a specialist master's degree.

She is due to join the University in January 2025. 5. Annex 11 shows the CV for Dr. Areti Stylianou. She has a Ph.D. from UCL but not in ELM, as claimed by the University.
There is a policy in place for the recruitment and selection of staff but criteria are not specific to the ELM field. The limited specific competence of the teaching staff was also pointed out in the 2018 evaluation and this remains a development need for the University. New ELM-specific professors should be recruited, including senior professors with established reputations.	 -All the staff have educational background, extensive teaching experience and some of them strong research background in education. Now, we focus on ELM field, and we have recruited new staff with expertise in ELM. -We have recruited new senior staff with experience in ELM (Dr. Maria Karamanidou, see her CV in Annex 10), in addition to the staff already in place, who address issues of ELM both in their teaching and research, either thematically or concerning specific fields of educational theory and practice. -The application continues to be open to identify additional staff with strong expertise in ELM. See the application in Annex 4. -We have also appointed as an Adjunct Lecturer Dr Areti Stylianou, who holds a PhD in Educational Leadership from UCL (See her CV in Annex 11). 	The intention to recruit ELM specialist staff is admirable but the University's response is inaccurate. Dr. Areti Stylianou has not been appointed as an adjunct lecturer, as claimed by the University, and she is not a specialist in ELM. Dr. Maria Karamanidou was Professor Bush's doctoral student, and is a capable lecturer, but she cannot be described as 'senior staff'. She has accepted a position as 'assistant professor', starting from January 2025. Annex 4 shows that the University is seeking to appoint ELM staff. It adds that the starting date would be on or before September 2023, suggesting that the University's recruitment strategy was unsuccessful until the appointment of Dr. Karamanidou.
The teaching staff is engaged in professional and teaching-skills training and development, but	-Teaching is an essential criterion in promoting our teachers/researchers.	Partial. It is positive to note that internal training is provided for teaching

The teaching staff have so few publications in ELM that it is not possible to secure meaningful synergies between teaching and research. Teachers, current or new, will need to be focused on ELM to strengthen the link between teaching and research.	 -Current and new teachers are focused on ELM to strengthen the link between teaching and research. -The faculty contracts provide that, besides teaching, the faculty member's top priority is to conduct frontier research and publications in top-tier refereed journals and pursue research grants in his/her area. He/she is encouraged and expected to collaborate on research with colleagues at UOL and beyond. Each faculty member has a conference attendance allowance of 2,000 euros, a research allowance of 2,000 euros per year for research assistants, data, etc., and a software allowance of 1,000 euros). -ELM staff will participate in the upcoming conference to be held in Cyprus on 12-13 April 2024 titled "Inspiring, guiding and empowering teachers and trainers: Convergences in Educational Leadership and Adult Education" (more info here https://frederick.ac.cy/en/educational- leadership-adult-education). Also, the ELM staff have already contacted the Educational Leadership Network Europe (ELNE) https://elnenetwork.org/ and will participate in the upcoming webinars and activities of the Network. Additionally, we will explore other opportunities in the coming months. -The UoL research policy is attached in Annex 3. 	Partial at best. The University's response is plausible but does not indicate which articles have been published in which journals. Links between research and ELM teaching cannot be established without this information. Annex 3 is just a generic research policy statement, not specific to ELM, and does not specify research outputs.

CYQAA CYPRUS AGENCY OF QUALITY ASSURANCE AND ACCREDITATION IN HIGHER EDUCATION

The EEC found that the staff have experience from various disciplines, and from working with the programme, but generally they don't have adequate experience of working within the field of ELM, not as researchers or practitioners. Therefore, we also raise concerns whether there are appropriate processes for the recruitment and development of the teaching staff.	Appropriate processes are in place for the recruitment and development of the teaching staff. Regarding the recruitment process, after creating a short list of candidates for a position in the Program, interviews are given before a committee of experts who decide on the person to be recruited. The development of the teaching staff is equally decided by a confident committee appointed for their promotion. The members of the Promotion Committee are chosen between the leading experts in the field of ELM worldwide.	Partial. The University outlines its recruitment and development processes, but these are general and not specific to ELM. Who are the ELM 'leading experts' mentioned in the University's response?
There is an evident lack of experience among staff within this particular field. This also raises questions about whether there are profound strategies for systematically recruiting experts within the field to ensure the competence of the teaching staff, despite the strategies described in the application.	Over the past two years, there has been a long-standing strategy for systematically recruiting experts within the field and an active recruitment process. Still, the Greek language requirement severely limits the applicants with the desired qualifications. We have recently recruited a new staff specialising in educational leadership, in addition to the staff already in place, who address issues of ELM in their teaching and research, either thematically or in relation to specific fields of educational theory and practice. The application call is always open until we find the appropriate person(s). In the meantime, all the staff (both permanent and visiting) are encouraged to participate in ELM seminars, conferences, and research in the field.	Partial. The 'long standing' recruitment strategy has had little impact so far. We recognise the challenges arising from the Greek language requirement but this only partly explains the failure to recruit staff with appropriate qualifications and experience. Only one new staff member has been recruited but she has not yet taken up the position.
ELM-specific teaching staff at different levels will be required to ensure a high-quality specialist programme. Graduates receive transcripts on completion of their programme but it is not clear if this provides grade details for each module.	All graduates are awarded an official transcript of their academic record showing the courses they attended, the ECTS credits corresponding to each course and the final grade. See Annex 12	Full.
Greater transparency is required in the respective roles of admissions officers and the programme director.	The admission policies and criteria, including academic requirements, standardized test scores, and other relevant factors, are easily accessible to applicants on our website.	Partial. The procedures outlined are clear but students are admitted who lack appropriate professional and academic backgrounds. It is not clear who is responsible for recruiting such atypical students.
	Additionally, comprehensive training on the established admission criteria is provided for admissions officers.
	There is also open communication between admissions officers, program directors, and prospective students.
Progression criteria from one module to another should be clear and transparent. The provision of up-to-date ELM specific books is urgently required.	-We have already updated our resources and made new subscriptions to journals related to ELM. The University's library stock includes very few specialist books. The response does not indicate what books if any, have been acquired since the EEC visit. At minimum, each module should have set books available in library stock, not just available on inter-library loan. The comment about the number of resources found when searching for educational leadership is misleading because it does not address the quality and relevance of these sources for an educational leadership master's program. The journals subscribed to by the University do not include any of the seven most important international ELM journals.
	- ProQuest Central Similarly, on this academic platform, students searching for the term 'educational leadership' have access to 245,511 results (academic journals, online resources, magazines, journals, books, conference material, reviews, etc.), full texts, and peer-reviewed results,

Similarly, subscriptions to the seven major ELM-specific international academic journals are an essential requirement	 -We have already subscribed to the following five (5) ELM journals: 1. Educational Leadership 2. Journal of Business and Educational Leadership 3. Journal of Special Education Leadership 4. Academy of Educational Leadership Journal 5. International Journal of Educational Policy & Leadership Furthermore, we have already discussed with SAGE and ProQuest Central and soon we will acquire subscriptions to the remaining two journals. 	Partial. The University's response betrays a lack of understanding about the top journals in this field. The five listed here are NOT leading journals. The seven major journals are: EMAL, EAQ, JEA, SL&M, IJEM, IJLE, and L&PiS. The credibility of the course is dependent on providing students (and staff) with access to these journals. This is especially important for the master's thesis, now expected from all students. This cannot be achieved through search engines because there is a paywall to access this content.

C. Conclusions and final remarks

Conclusions and final remarks by EEC	Actions Taken by the Institution	EEC's final recommendations and comments on the HEI's response
The design, curriculum, structure and content of the programme are largely inappropriate for a specialist ELM master's programme. The design, curriculum, structure and content of the programme require a fundamental review, to ensure the centrality of ELM teaching, research and literature.	Both conventional and online programs have been redesigned and restructured according to the accreditors' constructive feedback and suggestions. All the study guides were fundamentally reviewed according to the accreditors' feedback. See the study guides of the courses in Annex 5	Partial. Annexes 1 and 5 show that most courses (six out of nine) are not appropriate for a specialist ELM master's degree.
The teaching staff are mostly well qualified but not in respect of ELM- specific degrees, research or publications. Additional teaching staff should be recruited, including a full professor, whose qualifications, research and publications are central to the ELM field	We have recruited new senior staff with expertise in ELM, in addition to the staff already in place, who address issues of ELM both in their teaching and research, either thematically or in relation to specific fields of educational theory and practice. The application continues to be open to identify additional expertise.	Partial. A new assistant professor has been appointed and will take up her position in January. A senior staff member has not been appointed.
Teachers cannot draw on their own research to inform teaching on this programme because they do not have ELM-specific research and publications. The University should subscribe to the seven major specialist educational leadership journals.	New and existing staff are encouraged to participate in ELM conferences and publish in ELM journals. We are now in collaboration with Education Leadership network Europe (ELNE) following the trends and updates in the ELM field.	Partial. There is no evidence that staff are publishing in ELM journals. The University has not subscribed to the seven major ELM journals.
	We have already subscribed to the following five (5) ELM journals: 1. Educational Leadership 2. Journal of Business and Educational Leadership 3. Journal of Special Education Leadership 4. Academy of Educational Leadership Journal 5. International Journal of Educational Policy & Leadership

	Furthermore, we have already discussed with SAGE and ProQuest Central and soon we will acquire subscriptions to the remaining two journals.
